MICHELIN
BECAUSE SO MUCH IS RIDING
ON YOUR TIRES.

Baseball is serious business, and big leaguers must consider their game face an indispensable part of the uniform. But players know that baseball is fun as well. Asking the ever-ebullient Tony Peña to hold a stern countenance for long is an exercise in futility, while a lighthearted Roger Clemens can hardly pass up a chance to rib Ellis Burks about his bleep display.

Tony, Roger and Ellis form an imposing trio in the Red Sox' key up-the-middle positions of catcher, pitcher, and center fielder. In 1990, his first Sox season, Peña contributed stellar defense, timely offense and a contagious joie de vivre to his club; Clemens simply had another "Clemens year"—the modern-day standard of pitching excellence by which others are judged; and Burks, who was chosen to his first All-Star team, was a double threat as he captured his first Gold Glove and Silver Bat. The feature article "Pitching In" (page 50) profiles four Sox pitchers who stepped out of baseball's fringe into the spotlight of the 1990 pennant race.

Dana Kiecker, Greg Harris, Jeff Gray, and Tom Bolton were hardly household names last spring, but each was instrumental in bringing a division crown to Boston in the fall.

RED SOX AFFIRMATIVE ACTION POLICY

The Red Sox will not discriminate against any employee or applicant because of race, religion, color, sex, age, national origin, or ancestry. The Red Sox will take affirmative action to insure that such individuals are treated during their employment without regard to race, religion, color, sex, age, national origin, or ancestry. Such action shall include but not be limited to the following: hiring, upgrading, demotion, transfer, recruitment, layoff, rates of pay, all other forms of compensation, and selection for training.

Personnel procedures and practices with regard to training, promotion, transfer, compensation, demotion, layoff, or termination are to be administered with due regard to job performance, experience and qualifications, but without discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, or ancestry.

It is the policy of the Red Sox that, in the process of recruitment for and appointment to the work force, qualified minority group candidates will be encouraged to apply.

The Red Sox will not discriminate against any rehabilitated employee or applicant because of previous psychiatric treatment and/or confinement in a mental health facility. Employment will not be denied for such medical history unless there is a bonafide occupational qualification which precludes employment. Additionally, the Red Sox will not discriminate against any rehabilitated employee or applicant for employment because of physical handicap unless there is a bonafide occupational qualification which precludes employment.

The Red Sox will not discriminate against qualified minority-owned vendors and suppliers, including suppliers of both professional and non-professional services. The Red Sox will request that its vendors and suppliers submit assurance of their commitments to the goal of equal employment opportunity. The Red Sox will not discriminate in the leasing of commercial space.

Any Red Sox employee judged to be in willful and deliberate non-compliance with this equal opportunity policy will be subject to disciplinary action.

JEAN R. YAWKEY is chairwoman of the board of directors of the JRY Corporation, the majority owner, and general partner of the Red Sox. The former New York fashion model succeeded her husband, Tom, after his death in 1976.

Tom Yawkey was the sole owner of the team for 44 seasons, longer than any one owner in baseball history. He transformed the Red Sox from one of baseball's weakest franchises to among the healthiest, and left behind a New England tradition.

In addition to attending virtually every home game, Mrs. Yawkey actively participates along with other JRY Corporation officers in management issues involving the club.

Mrs. Yawkey has long been associated with New England's Jimmy Fund/Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, formerly as chairwoman of the board and now as a trustee. She helped establish the Family Inn in Brookline, a temporary home for families of patients undergoing transplant surgery in Boston area hospitals. She is also a trustee of the Yawkey Foundation, which supports the 40,000-acre Tom Yawkey Wildlife Center, willed by Mr. Yawkey to the state of South Carolina. Mrs. Yawkey and the Yawkey Foundation have established endowment funds at several educational institutions to provide minority students and others with scholarship aid. Mrs. Yawkey and the Yawkey Foundation also support numerous humanitarian, cultural, and athletic activities, including the Boys & Girls Clubs of Boston, Boston Park League Baseball, The Sports Museum of New England, and the Boston Pops and Symphony Orchestras. Mrs. Yawkey is a director of the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum, and holds the distinction of being the first woman elected to serve on the board of that baseball shrine.

HAYWOOD C. SULLIVAN has been a general partner in the ownership of the Red Sox since May 1978. He is a Boston baseball success story — a one-time reserve catcher who rose from the dugout to team ownership.

A top pro prospect in both football and baseball, Sullivan signed with the Red Sox on June 15, 1952. The Sox outbid the New York Yankees, among other teams, for Sullivan's services. The 6-4, 210-pounder, plagued by chronic back problems, played in only 60 games over parts of four seasons for the Sox before being dealt to the Kansas City A's, where he appeared in 252 games from 1961-63 before retiring to manage in the minors. Two seasons later, in 1965, he was back to manage the A's, leaving at year's end to rejoin the Red Sox as vice president in charge of player personnel. Within a year, on the heels of eight sub-.500 seasons, the Red Sox became contenders. And so they have remained under Sullivan's leadership.

Sullivan is a member of Major League Baseball's Budget and Audit Committee, Umpire Development and Long-Range Planning Committee. He was elected in 1988 to his second four-year term on the Major League Executive Council, and is a trustee of the Jimmy Fund.

LOU GORMAN is running the Sox' baseball operations for the eighth year. He was promoted to senior vice president and general manager October 16, 1987, and in December 1988 signed a four-year extension of his contract that began February 1, 1989. Lou came to the club from the New York Mets in February 1984 as vice president and director of baseball operations, and was promoted to vice president and general manager that June. He handles all matters relating to the operation of the major league club on the field, and holds the overall responsibility for the procurement and development of talent.

Coming to Boston was a return to his roots for Gorman, who grew up in Providence, Rhode Island as a "dyed in the wool" Red Sox fan. Lou graduated from LaSalle Academy in Providence and Stonehill College in North Easton, Massachusetts.

He began his major league career as the assistant farm and scouting director for the Baltimore Orioles, after having served an apprenticeship in the minors as general manager at Lakeland in the Florida State League and Kinston, NC, in the Carolina League. In 1985, he was inducted into the Kinston Sports Hall of Fame. Gorman spent time in various positions with Baltimore, Kansas City, Seattle, and the New York Mets before coming to the Red Sox.

Lou serves on the Major League Amateur Study Committee, the Major League College and High School Committee, and is a member of the board of directors of the Major League Scouting Bureau. He is also on the board of visitors of Massachusetts Maritime Academy, and the Science/Management Council at Bridgewater State College.

THE MANAGER

JOE MORGAN • 35

Morgan successfully juggled 24 position players plus 20 pitchers to lead the 1990 Red Sox to their second American League East title in his three years at the helm. Joe was named the 37th manager of the Red Sox on July 14, 1988, and the rest of the season was pure "Morgan's Magic." His club swept an 11-game homestand, won 12 straight overall and 19 of 20 to move into a first place tie. That surge included 19 straight Fenway wins as part of an American League-record 24 home victory string as he piloted the team from fourth place, nine games behind the Detroit Tigers at the All-Star break to the divisional title. The graduate of Walpole (MA) High School and Boston College was himself a stand-out collegiate baseball and hockey player. He signed with the Boston Braves organization in 1952 and spent 15 seasons as a minor league infielder-outfielder with three .300 seasons. He had short stints in the majors from 1959-1964 with the Milwaukee Braves, Kansas City A's, Philadelphia Phillies, Cleveland Indians, and St. Louis Cardinals. After retiring as a player, Joe was hired by the Red Sox organization in 1974 as manager of triple-A Pawtucket. He joined the big club in 1985 as first base coach, then moved to the bullpen for one season before taking over the third base coach duties in 1987. Before joining the Sox, he coached and managed in the Pittsburgh system from 1966-73.

Most people see shaving as something that you do for a few minutes a day. But at Braun, we see shaving as something you do for a lifetime.

Which is why we've designed our shaver's thin profile to fit the contours of your face as comfortably as your hand. And why the rubber knobs on our grip actually quiet motor noise, as well as provide a firm hold. Our rechargeable shavers charge in an hour instead of twenty-four; and perform equally well with or without a cord. Even our foil is ultra-thin and platinum coated to help provide a closer, smoother shave.

This comprehensive approach to shaving has made Braun the best-selling foil shaver in the world.

THE COACHES

Dick Berardino
Al Bumbry
John McLaren
Bill Fischer
Richie Hebner

BILL FISCHER PITCHING COACH • 34

Fischer received many well-deserved accolades in 1990 for his handling of the 20 different pitchers, including 12 starters, who hurled for the Sox. Signed by the Chicago White Sox in 1948, Fischer's own pitching career spanned 20 years, and he holds the major league record for the most consecutive innings without giving up a base on balls (84.1). Bill has coached the Sox' pitchers since 1985.

RICHIE HEBNER HITTING COACH • 32

Hebner, a Norwood, MA native, takes charge of the Sox bats for the third year. Under his tutelage in 1990, Boston topped all major league clubs in batting average (.272) and on-base pct. (.344).

Richie's 18-year major league career included four .300 seasons.

AL BUMBRY FIRST BASE COACH • 37

Bumbry begins his fourth year as the Sox' first base coach. He holds the Orioles career stolen base record (252) and is sixth on their all-time hit list (1,403). Al was the A.L.'s Rookie of the Year in 1973.

DICK BERARDINO THIRD BASE COACH • 34

Berardino was named third base coach last fall after serving two years as the Sox' bullpen coach.

Dick spent eight seasons as a minor league outfielder in the Yankees organization.

JOHN MCLAREN BULLPEN COACH • 36

McLaren was named the Sox' bullpen coach last winter after a five-year stint as third base coach for the Blue Jays. A former catcher in the Houston organization from 1970-76, John has coached since 1977.

Why are Cellular One car phones such a big hit with New England business people? Well, think about it. Right off the bat you can use one to cover your bases, sign a big contract and keep your eye on the ball. With a Cellular One phone you're always safe: you can get help for a flat tire or an emergency.

Cellular One's also the right call because you'll get the lowest airtime rates and the only rate plans with free calling nights and weekends. (Long Distance, Roaming and any New England Telephone landline charges still apply.) And right now, you can swing a Cellular One car phone for less money than ever before. So why not sign with the top cellular team: Cellular One. Just call 1-800-CELL-ONE today.

You'll find out why we're New England's most popular cellular network by far, on your very first road trip.

In 1986, the day we clinched the division, Al Nipper and myself did a Channel 4 interview with Don Shane which we had promised to do on that date way in advance, not knowing when we were going to clinch. When we beat the Blue Jays, Nip and I ended up going on the air a little bit too celebrated. The actual show itself was at about 11:00, and we were probably celebrating from 4:00 till 11:00. I tried to keep it as legit an interview as I could, but it got out of hand a few times. We were head-butting and a bunch of crazy stuff. Then, after we won the playoffs later that year, a cop was sitting on a horse on the field. People were yelling at me to get up on the horse, so I did, and we rode around Fenway.

ROGER CLEMENS RHP • 21

The Rocket authored an eight-game win streak with an 0.86 ERA, culminating on August 30, 1990 with his 20th victory of the season in a gutsy performance in Cleveland. He reached 20 wins for the third time in the last five years, becoming only the fourth pitcher in Red Sox history to post three 20-win seasons.

WADE BOGGS.....

Boggs collected his 1,700th career hit at Fenway Park on July 18, 1990, the night the Red Sox combined with the Minnesota Twins for an all-time major league record 10 double plays.

I was April Fool's during spring training in 1987, and I decided to play a joke. I went to see John McManus' office and told him to call John Travolta in and tell him that he was being sent home. So Mac doesn't and all 56 guys are laughing around thinking it was a funny April Fool's joke, but Travolta comes out of the office and yells in his eyes. I'm thinking the joke really kind of fell on me because I was the thing. Then everybody's yelling, "April Fool's!" and he goes, "Ahhhh, I knew it all along, guys!" He took it very well.

I was called up for the first time in late April of 1987, and played my first major league game the next day at Seattle. That game still ranks as the most embarrassing moment of my career. I was playing in center field, and I dropped the first ball hit to me. It was a line drive off Harold Reynolds' bat right at me—boom! An error. A run scored. I thought I was on my way back down. But for some reason they didn't hold it against me, and kept me as the regular center fielder for the rest of the season.

Burks tied a major league record by homering twice in one inning, the fourth, at Cleveland on August 27, 1990. The feat has been accomplished 26 times before in major league history, but only once before by a Red Sox—Bill Regan in 1928 in Chicago (one of his was inside the park).

MIKE GREENWELL

By belting a round-tripper at Chicago on September 13, 1990, during the Red Sox' last series ever at Comiskey Park, Greenwell reached the milestone of having homered in every American League park.

During a nationally televised game a few years ago, I was the ninth hitter in the order. One inning, I came up and got to first base on an error. There was one out, and the next guy hit a fly ball to right that I was sure would fall in. It was a Game of the Week and I was really hustling and kept running all the way to third base. Well, my hustle didn't pay off because the outfielder caught the fly ball and threw it to first base. I was standing on third when I was out. Right on national TV. That was pretty embarrassing.

NORTHWEST AIRLINES

One of the most memorable and exciting moments of my career so far came in 1985 when I was with the Cardinals. It was the ninth inning of the sixth game of the National League playoffs against the Dodgers, and we were losing. I came up with two out and two on and hit a three-run homer off Tom Niedenfuer, which won the game and basically got us into the World Series. After the game, I was asked if I was surprised that they pitched to me in that situation, but I wasn't. They had done that to me before. The Dodgers played the game the old-fashioned way—they don't like to concede anything.

With his 10th-inning blast off Atlanta lefty Kent Mercker on July 30, 1990, Clark, playing for the San Diego Padres, moved past Babe Ruth and Frank Robinson into second place on the major league all-time extra-inning homers list with 17 (behind Willie Mays with 22).

I once won a game and didn't even know it. It was my rookie year, and I came into what I thought was a tie ballgame. I must not have been paying very good attention or maybe I was just feeling the pressure, because when I got the side out in the ninth, I started to run into the dugout to wait for the 10th. But everyone was coming to the mound trying to shake my hand. I go, "what's going on?" My teammates had to tell me I had won the game, and I never felt more like a rookie than I did at that moment.

After surgery for a ruptured disc which kept him out of action from July 21st until September 12th, Reardon returned with a vengeance, tallying two wins and three saves in the last five Red Sox wins of the 1990 season.

Reed tied for the major league lead (with George Brett) with 45 doubles in 1990, and contributed two of them in the Sox' American League-record 12-double game on July 29th in Detroit.

Id... spring training in 1974
 we had a game in Clearwater and I was going to drive from my home in Tampa and miss the train home over-there. I left on time and got to the ballpark, but I wasn't sure where to go in. So I asked where the clubhouse was, but nobody believed I was a ballplayer and they wouldn't let me in. They said I didn't look like a ballplayer.
 I even saw our team coach, but I still couldn't get to the locker room. About halfway through BP
 I told a policeman that if he didn't believe me he could arrest me, but otherwise I had to get out on the field. So he let me in. I didn't have a mustache then, which might have helped clear some doubt.
 That's why I grow one back every year now.

Park for an hour.

Fenway Park for a month.

For about the price of an hour's parking in a downtown lot, you can see a lot of the Olde Towne Team.

This season NESN will cover nearly 100 Red Sox games, about 15 a month. So park yourself in front of your TV and watch the Red Sox drive toward the pennant on NESN.

When

I was over in the National League with the Astros, about three years ago, I got a base hit into the gap in a game at Montreal. When I got to first base I looked up to see where the ball was, and I ran to second. A run crossed the plate which would have tied the ballgame for us. Then I heard the first baseman, Andres Gallaraga, hollering for the ball, but I couldn't understand why. The umpire at second asked me, "Do you need your jacket, Danny?" The fans were all cheering, and I said, "Well, we better wait a minute." The ball went in to Gallaraga, he stepped on the bag, and they called me out. I hadn't touched first. That walk from second back to the dugout seemed like a mile.

DANNY DARWIN.....

Pitching as both a starter and a reliever for the Astros in 1990, Darwin led the National League in ERA (2.21), winning percentage (.786), and fewest walks allowed per nine innings (1.7).

TOM BRUNANSKY

Bruno belted five homers and drove in eight runs in the crucial September 1990 series versus the Toronto Blue Jays at Fenway, then earned folk hero status for his spectacular game-ending sliding catch in right field off Chicago's Ozzie Guillen

Early last season when I was still with the St. Louis Cardinals, I went to bed and took a bath. I stood at the plate thinking it was ball four... and the umpire must have given me about 40 seconds to realize that it was actually ball four. I was still up there ready to hit and everybody was looking at me kind of strange, so I looked back at the umpire. He said to me, "What are you doing, swing?" At that point I realized what had happened and I kind of cringed on down to first base. I don't even remember who that game was against. Those things I guess you try to forget.

My first at bat in the major leagues was kind of strange. It was at Fenway Park in late September of 1988. I remember it was a Friday night and the stands were packed because we were playing the Yankees. We were up by two runs in the fifth and we had the bases loaded. Joe Morgan had me pinch hit for Jim Rice. I could hardly believe it. I got up there and I was scared. The fans were all yelling. Anyway, the count went to 3 and 2 and I got a pitch on the outside part of the plate that was very close, but the umpire called ball four, and that walked in a run.

The Q stroked the American League record-setting 12th double of the Red Sox' two-bagger spree, July 29, 1990 at Detroit. The hit came in the ninth inning off Tigers reliever Mike Henneman.

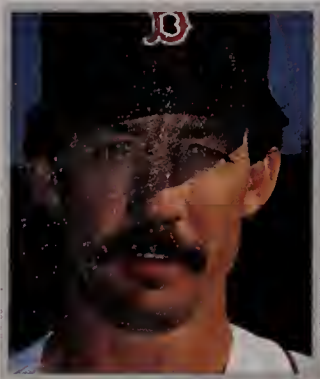

MATT YOUNG

Young, a Seattle Mariner in 1990, tied a major league record by striking out four batters in an inning on September 9th at Fenway (Wade Boggs fanned but reached on a passed ball). Young became the 21st pitcher in history to accomplish the feat.

My rookie year, '83, I must have had baseball in my hall room. That's hard for a pitcher to do. It's not like my league mates, Mickey Henderson but a one-bagger off my right and a violation is the third baseman who threw him out. A few games later in Boston I threw a fastball which came back at me on the same trajectory, hit me in the shoulder and bounced up in the air. Our shortstop caught it but we had. About three games later, a low drive bounced off the side of my head and it was a double for me out. And a month later a one-bagger hit off my shoe and bounced to the shortstop, who tagged second and threw to first for the double play. In about a two month period I got hit five times and it accounted for six outs.

I was one of the instigators of the famous rally cap game in Seattle in 1990. It was a tie ballgame. Seattle was doing some rally capping, and we were trying to go one notch better. Say they had their hats with the bills up; we would counter by turning our hats around and putting the lids up. It got better and better until they came out with sheets over their heads like sheiks. So about five of us went into the clubhouse and put shaving cream all over our faces and cut the ends off some paper cups and stuck them on our ears. The Mariners just bowed down and said that was the greatest. We probably looked like jerks, but it was hilarious, and it worked. By George, Dewey hit a home run to win the ballgame.

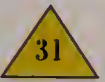

GREG HARRIS

Harris' 30 starts and 184.1 innings pitched in 1990 were season highs for his 14-year major league career. He combined with Jeff Gray on a two-hit shutout of the Blue Jays, Boston's third straight, at Toronto on August 26th.

I was in Nashua, New Hampshire with the New Britain Red Sox a few years ago. The famous chicken was doing some stunts there, and somehow I got involved in one. I had to go out on the field and pretend to be a roach. They put a team away uniform on me and all I had on under it were some black-orange boxer shorts and bare legs. The chicken came up from behind and handcuffed me, then pulled my uniform off. So I'm standing in my boxer shorts out in front of about 500 people, and the chicken's running around with my clothes. I'm an outgoing person, but I really didn't know what I was getting into until it was too late, and then I kinda wished I wouldn't have gotten in that deep.

After nearly quitting baseball in the 1989-1990 off-season following eight years in the Red Sox' minor league system, the 29-year-old rookie made the club out of spring training in 1990 and contributed eight wins to the A.L. East champions, including two in Toronto's SkyDome.

LUIS RIVERA

Of Rivera's career-high seven home runs in 1990, six came in the seventh inning or later. He had the Sox' first grand slam of the season in the eighth inning on August 31st to nail down a 7-3 win over the Yankees.

Welcome to the Space Age...

AUTO PALACE The Automotive Super Store

You'll notice the difference as soon as you walk into an Auto Palace store. Space... 10,000 square feet of it packed with over 12,000 items... featuring New England's largest selection of car care products; names you know and trust like Armorall, Purolator, Rally and Sunoco. All at rock bottom prices that will blow you away! We're no mom and pop shop, we're the future. Auto Palace... the automotive superstore.

BUD

KING OF BEERS

Probably the most incredible baseball event I saw up close was Kirk Gibson getting ready to hit that home run in Game One of the 1988 Dodgers-A's World Series. I mean, it was the ninth inning and 15 minutes before he was out of action in the trainer's room with ice packs all over him, watching the game on television. The next thing we knew, he was hobbling into the dugout and picking up a bat. None of us sitting on the bench could believe it, you know—he was really hurting. But he limped up to the plate against Dennis Eckersley, fouled off what seemed like a hundred pitches, and then hit that shot to win the game. It was like "The Natural."

MIKE MARSHALL.....1B/OF • 22

Marshall was traded to Boston from the New York Mets on July 28, 1990, and made an immediate contribution to the club, driving in six runs in his first seven games in a Red Sox uniform.

ROB MURPHY

LHP • 47

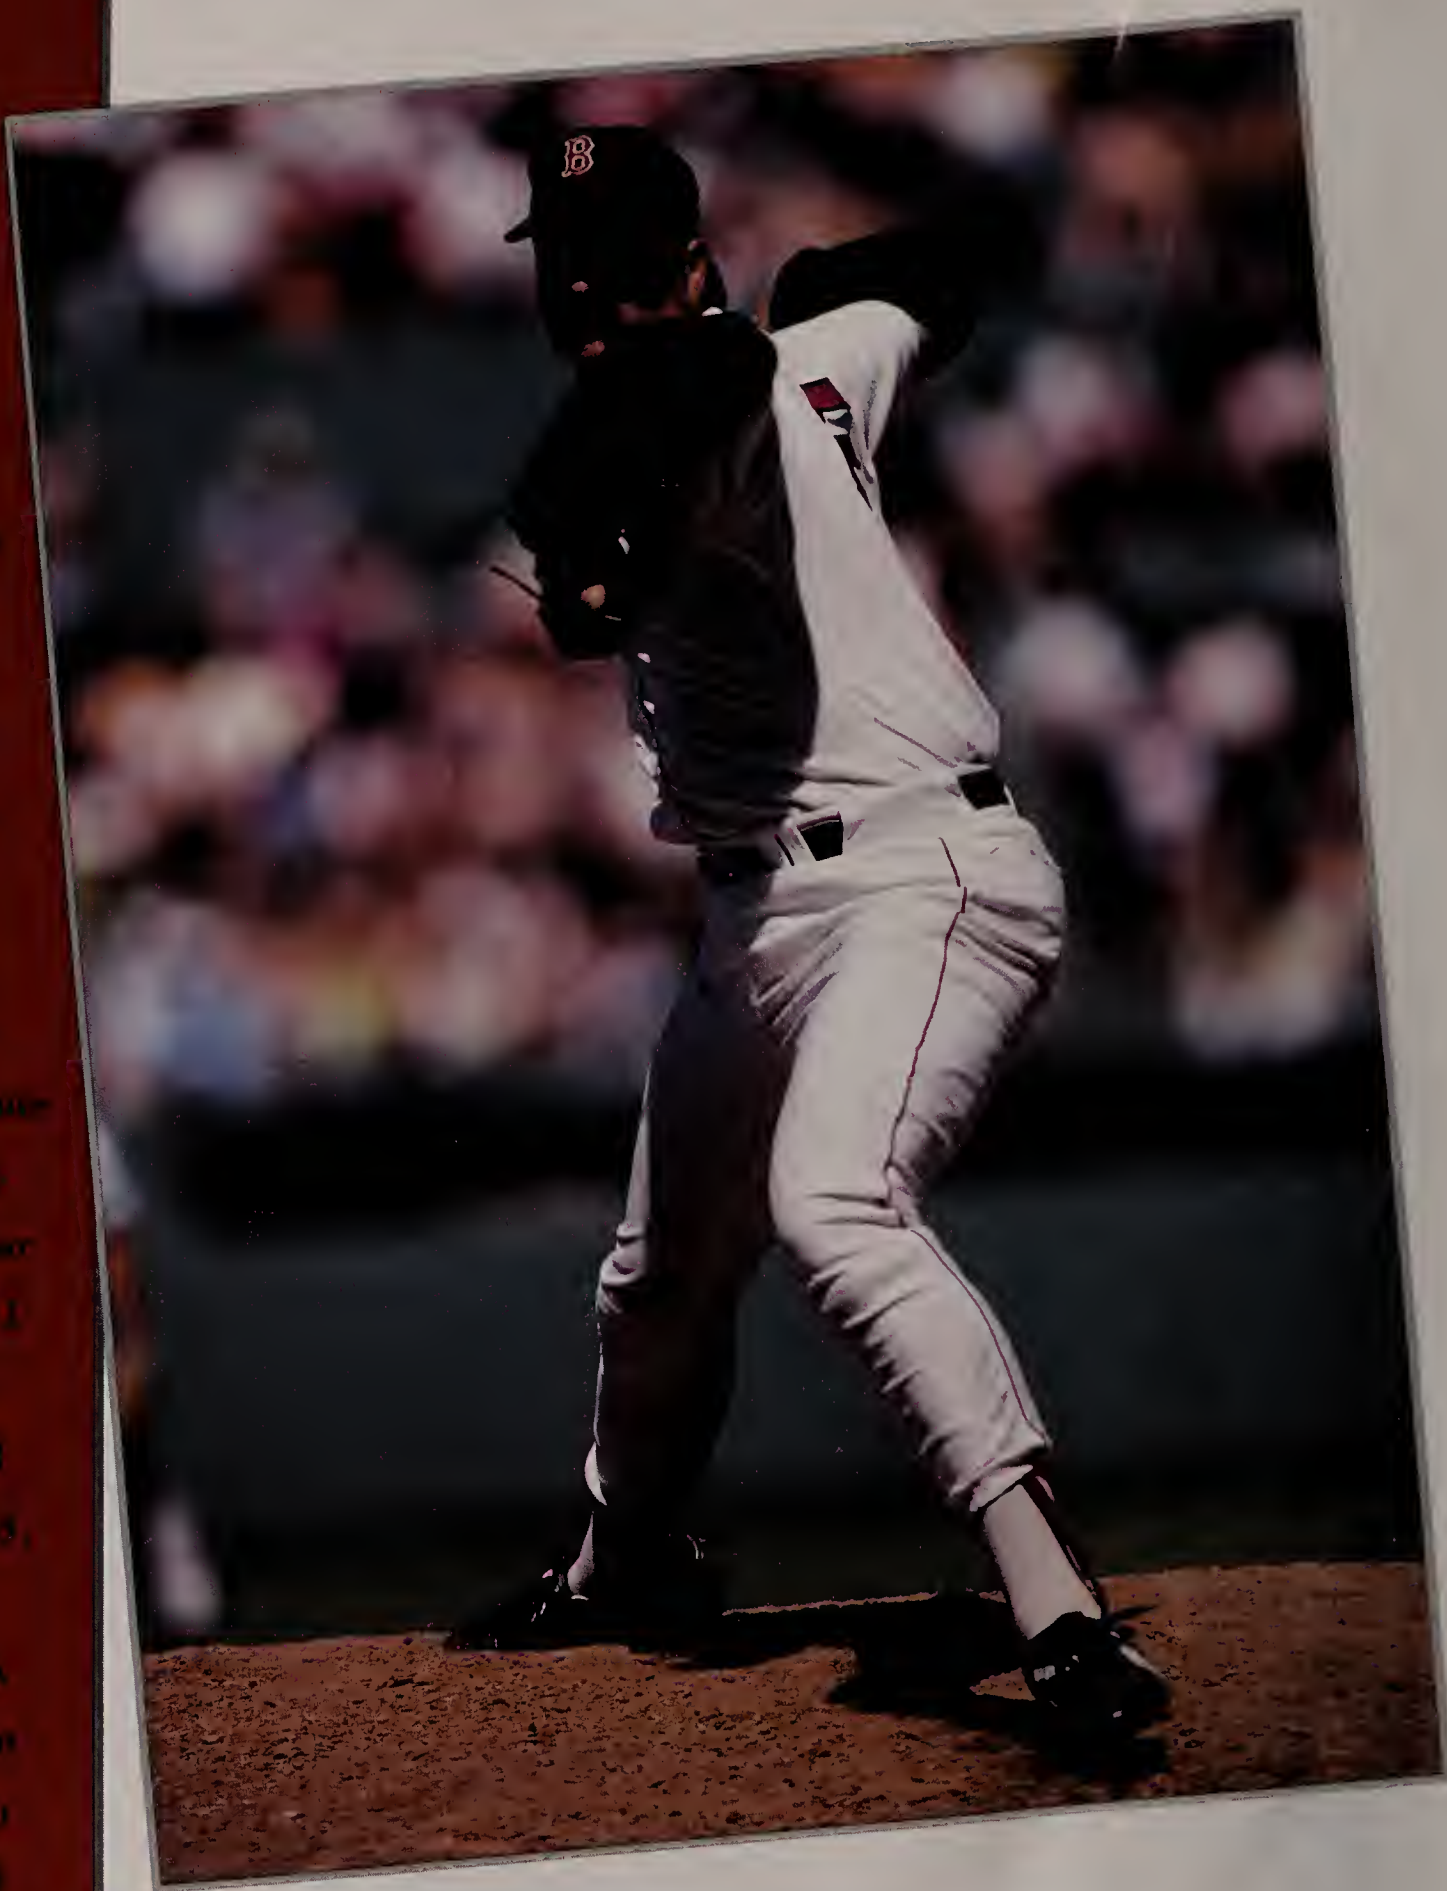

Murphy holds the major league record for errorless games at the start of a career (332), a streak which ended in the ninth inning of the September 5, 1990 contest versus the Oakland A's.

D...
I never told you this story. It was just a ball in the box. When you summer, and a guy can be a pitcher, you know it's a long-up, just come up outside and around with a long drive.
I never thought you could get a mound of your own, and the pitcher and the batter knows there was a difference between the pitch and a long-up was up there with the infield and the outfield and there were some very nice, hard throw into. I think they were just down close to the line. It's a matter of time.

When I was with the Cubs '78 or '79, I started a game against the Phillies on May 17th, my wife's birthday. I said, "Tom, I'm going to win this one for you." But by the time she sat down Philly had scored seven runs. Herman Franks came in late in the 10th inning. He said, "Did you lower the weather report?" I said no. He took the ball from me, pointed to the dugout and said, "Showers."

The next thing you know, we scored six in the bottom half. Then they scored. It was 11 to 11 going into the fifth inning. Then it was 22 to 22, after seven innings. There were 30 hits in the game, which Philly wound up winning by a final score of 23-22. Oh, what a game.

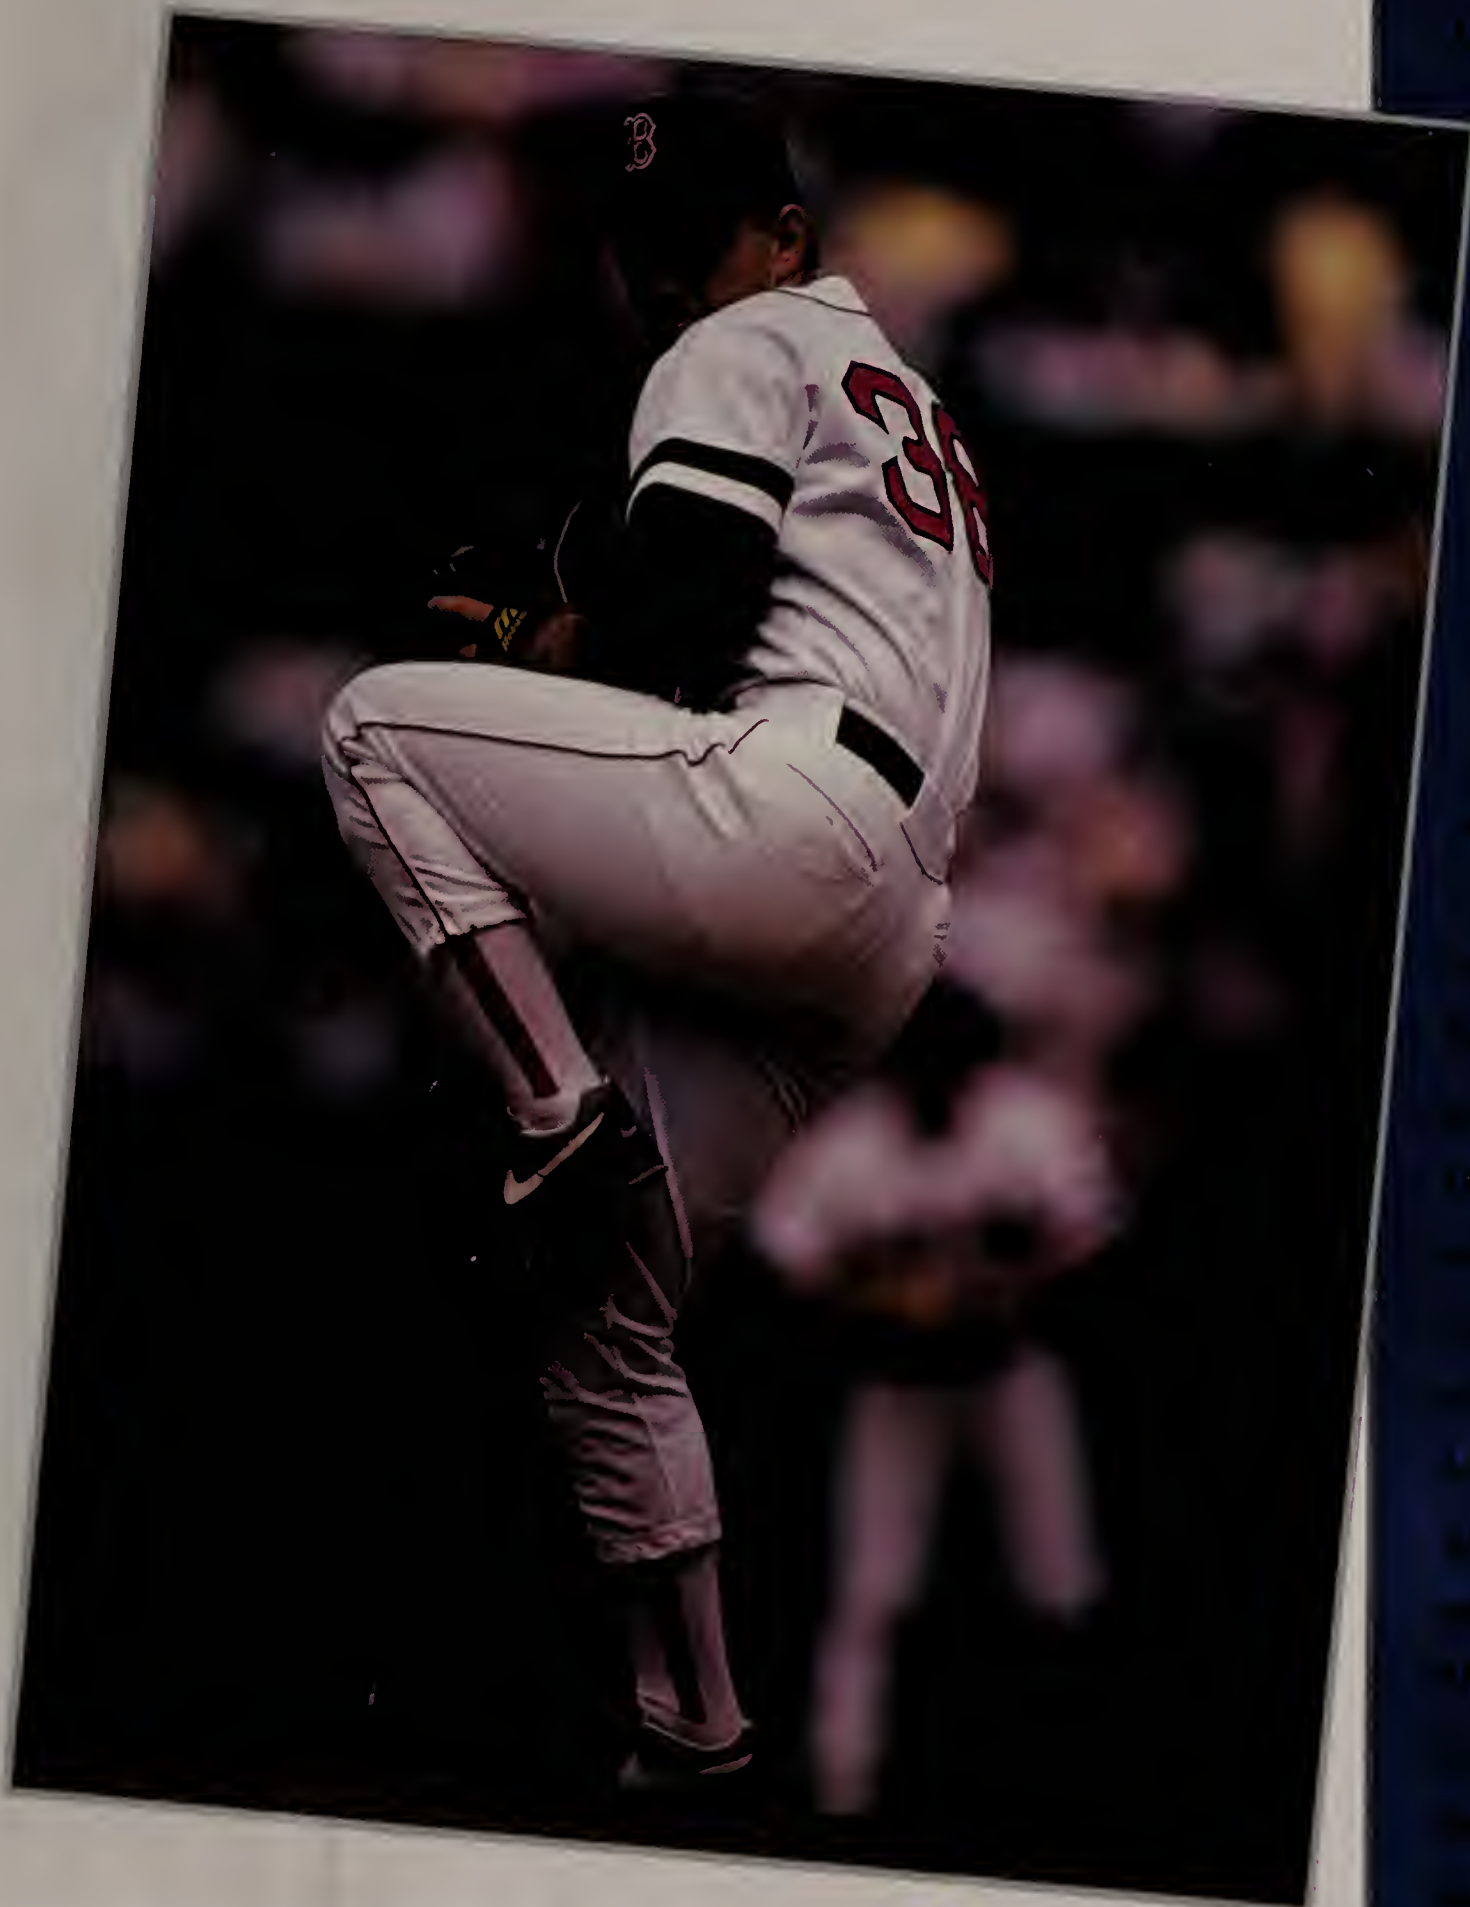

DENNIS LAMP

RHP • 15

On September 11, 1990, the Sox' long relief man made his first start since August 7, 1987 when he was with the Oakland A's. He went five innings and allowed only one earned run for a no-decision.

JEFF GRAY.....RHP • 38

Signed to a Pawtucket contract after his release from the Phillies, Gray was called up to Boston June 5th and was scored upon just once in his first eight outings. He notched his first major league win June 23rd and his first save the next day.

PITCHING

“PITCHING WINS PENNANTS.”

In 1990, baseball’s most time-tested adage was in evidence once more for the American League Eastern Division champion Boston Red Sox. To wit, 21 of the Sox’ total of 88 victories saw the club score but three or fewer runs. Yes, Pitching wins pennants.

And while the marquis moundsmen—Roger Clemens, Mike Boddicker, and Jeff Reardon—dominated the stat charts and the headlines as predicted, four other unheralded hurlers far exceeded the expectations of the club and its fans.

One 29-year-old rookie, one anonymous reliever, one 34-year-old journeyman, and one mop-up man outdid themselves, tallying career-best individual seasons and collectively keeping the Sox in the pennant chase.

BY BILL BALLOU

hen the 1990 major league baseball season finally began on the heels of a tumultuous pre-season lockout, Boston's franchise fielded more questions than Dear Abby. And the greatest angst of all centered around the pitching staff. Who was going to pitch? Roger Clemens would be the anchor, granted, supported nicely by Mike Boddicker and John Dopson. And they'd be backed up by a bullpen which included not one, but two of the best stoppers in baseball, Jeff Reardon and Lee Smith. But seasoned observers knew that despite this quality core, the club hadn't enough depth to get to the post-season. The Sox needed pitching, they said—all kinds of pitching.

The pundits were right. Well before mid-season rolled around, two of the five key factors in the pitching equation were gone—Smith was traded away on May 4th, and Dopson suffered a season-ending elbow injury after just four starts. Later, in July, Reardon also went down.

Yet when the clock tolled midnight on the third of October to close out the 1990 regular season, the Boston Red Sox were the champions of the American League East.

What forces combined to result in this fortuitous conclusion? The Sox' offense, peppered with sub-par performances, was not the scoring machine of previous championship seasons. And while Clemens, Boddicker, and Reardon shone, no other "big name" pitcher was acquired to address the pre-season concerns. The most astounding development of the 1990 season, however, was pitching—namely a squad of four hitherto unknown soldiers who somehow carried the staff through some rough spots on the march to the A.L. East title.

Dana Kiecker, after having nearly given up on ever making it to The Show without a ticket, notched eight key wins. Greg Harris, at age 34, contributed the best season of his nine-year major league career. Jeff Gray, newly released from the ranks of the Philadelphia Phillies' farm system, showed big league stuff in his role of stopper/setup man as the situation required. And Tom Bolton, in his fourth stab at the big time, tallied 10 victories, all after July 1.

"It's simple," sums up Boston pitching coach Bill Fischer. "Those guys saved the ship."

IN THE 10 DAYS PRECEDING Boston's August 24th date at Toronto's SkyDome, the Blue Jays had picked up two games on the Sox. They could erase Boston's lead in the A.L. East with a victory on this night.

DANA KIECKER

"When I pitch, I believe I'm the best pitcher in baseball."

Dana Kiecker, 29, was 4-6 in this, his first big league season. Toronto starter Jimmy Key, a seven-year showtime vet though two months younger than Kiecker, was 85-55 lifetime and 6-3 against Boston. The smart money was riding on the Blue Jays, but both pitchers excelled through seven innings when it was Key left the game first. The score was tied 0-0.

Kiecker breezed through the eighth and his effort was rewarded as the Sox scored twice off Duane Ward in the top of the ninth. Jeff Gray came on in the bottom of the inning to save the 2-0 victory, which put Boston two games up.

The line on Kiecker: Eight innings, five hits, no runs, four walks, and five strikeouts for the win.

Dana Kiecker arrived at Fenway Park via the back stairs. He had knocked on all the other entry ports during an eight-year minor league career that included all the usual Red Sox stops—Elmira, Winston-Salem, Winter Haven, New Britain, and Pawtucket. The door was finally opened last year because of the lockout, as Kiecker benefitted from an early season expanded roster.

But in the seven months between springtime in Winter Haven and crunchtime in Toronto, the determined hurler established himself as more than a lockout luck-out. He was a money player.

Kiecker's first start was April 27, his first win June 9. By season's end he had registered 25 starts, most by a Sox rookie since Mike Nagy in 1969. More importantly, several of those starts resulted in victories just when Boston most needed them.

Kiecker seemed to be a veteran in rookie's clothing. By the time he pitched in his first major league game at age 29, most of his minor league teammates had long since either arrived in The Show or abandoned their dreams.

"I don't look at it that way," Kiecker rationalizes. "Look around. There's Wade Boggs, who spent six years in the minors. And Mike Boddicker, another six. Tom Bolton was there for 10 years. The only difference between them and me is that they started when they were 18 and I started when I was 22."

Still, Kiecker opened few eyes during his journey to the bigs. "His minor league record

Top photos: Dana Kiecker

(59-66) wasn't very good," said Morgan. "But some of his teams weren't very good, either."

Valid point. While Kiecker was a combined 15-16 in Triple A in 1988 and '89, Pawtucket's aggregate record for those seasons was 125-163.

"Maybe I was overlooked," Kiecker recalls, "but the time I spent down there was productive. I gained experience...I learned what it takes to pitch and win, the mentality, the preparation."

Somewhere along the line the word "perseverance" has to be mentioned, too. A strong work ethic was stressed on the farm in Fairfax, Minnesota, where Kiecker was raised. Mornings came early and, while there was always time for sports, there was never any time to waste. Even after turning pro, Dana returned to Minnesota each winter, most years to work as a delivery man for United Parcel Service.

There was talk of a future with UPS—something in management. But in December, 1989 the Sox put Kiecker on the 40-man roster and finally there was talk of a "pickup" in Boston, too.

One sunny morning in the spring of 1990, while Kiecker was pitching live batting practice on the field just below Chain O'Lakes Park, Joe Morgan watched the righty for the first time since scouting him at Elmira in 1983.

"He throws harder than I remember," the sometimes clairvoyant manager was heard to say. "He might be able to help us." With a solid spring, and because teams were allowed to take two extra men north, Kiecker became one—perhaps the last—of Morgan's select 27.

He debuted in Detroit on April 12, a day so cold that the Tiger Stadium grounds crew had spent the morning shovelling snow off the outfield. When starter Wes Gardner blew out his elbow, Kiecker came on in relief. The Sox lost, 11-7, and Dana's line for his first big league appearance was two earned runs in four innings; not bad, but hardly a preview of what he'd be doing come the warmer weather.

On June 19th, Kiecker beat the Blue Jays in Toronto, 4-2, without allowing an earned run. He then earned the Sox' only victory—3-1 in Kansas City—during a near-disastrous 1-6 road stretch in mid-July. And, of course, he shut out the Jays in the SkyDome on August 24.

The untested rookie, however, was saving his best for the pressure-packed stretch. Kiecker was a cool 2-0 winner at Yankee Stadium on September 21 during the Sox' 2-8 road trip. His 7-2 Fenway Park victory over Cleveland four days later broke the club's three-game losing skein. He proceeded to allow just one run in seven innings when Boston beat Chicago, 4-3, to clinch at least a tie for the A.L. East title on October 1.

Last winter, back home in Minnesota, he reflected on his successful rookie year with a veteran's perspective.

"When it came down to the last couple weeks," he noted matter-of-factly, "Roger was out, Harris was struggling, Bolton lost a couple straight, and Boddicker was pitching hurt. I told myself, 'if we're going to win this thing, you're gonna have to be the guy to win it.'"

"I think it was the way he carried himself," Morgan says of Kiecker's ability to pitch in the clutch. "He'd make a pitch, then come in a couple steps and grab the throw from the catcher. It was like he was saying, 'Gimme that ball and let's go. We've got people to get out here.'"

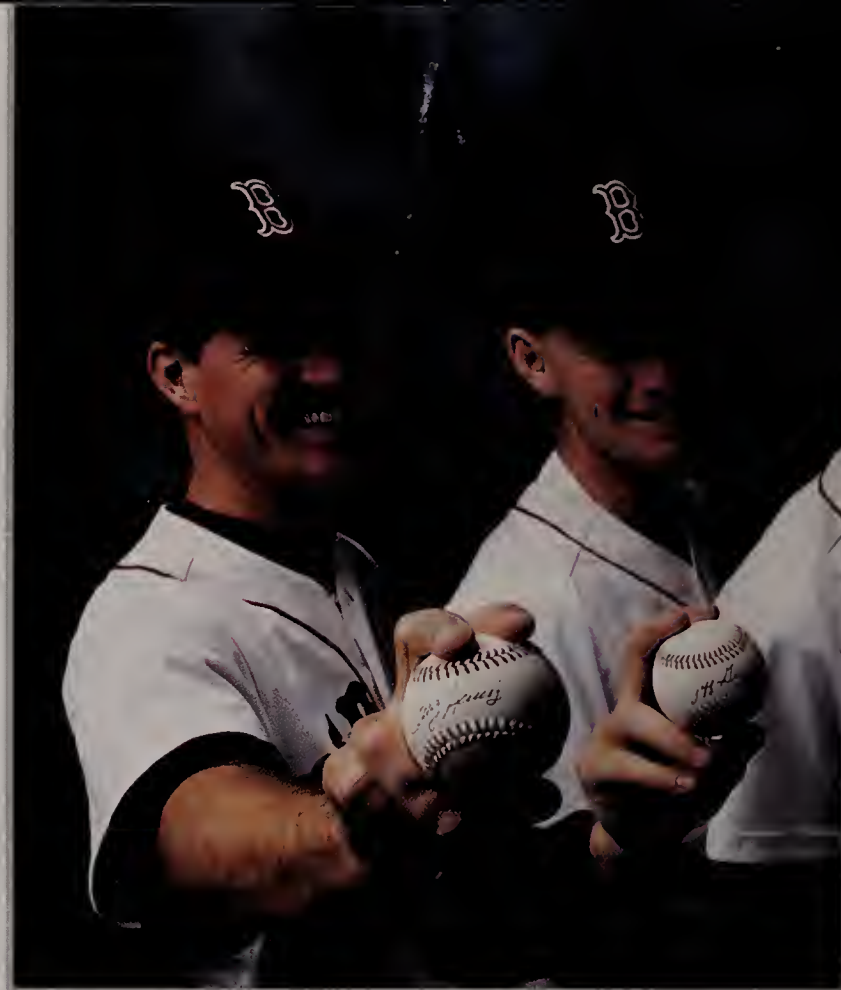

Kiecker concurs. "When I pitch," he asserts, "nobody has a more positive attitude. I believe I'm the best pitcher in baseball. I mean, I'm a realist. I know I'm not Roger Clemens or Nolan Ryan—they throw it 95 miles an hour and I'm down there at 88 or 89—and there'll be days I get beaten. But that doesn't change my approach. When I've got the ball, I think I'm the best there is."

The best? Last year, just being Dana Kiecker was good enough to help the Red Sox to win a division title, and for the almost thirtysomething phenom to pitch in on a champion.

WOULD THE SOX LEAVE Canada with the same two-game lead they'd sported upon their arrival, or could they sneak through customs up by four?

After a second straight Boston shutout of Toronto on August 25, the club moved to three up in the standings. The following day, neither team scored through seven innings as Greg Harris and Todd Stottlemyre baffled hitters pitch-for-pitch. Harris had allowed but one hit and one walk while striking out eight. A Jody Reed single put the Sox up 1-0 in the top of the eighth, and when Harris finally tired a bit in the bottom of the frame, he handed the ball over to reliever Jeff Gray, who finished off the club's whitewash hat trick.

It marked the first time since 1962 that Boston pitching had registered three straight shutouts and the first time since 1916 that the club had secured back-to-back 1-0 wins. More importantly, however, Greg Harris had helped the Sox return south of the border with a four-game division lead.

Before arriving in Boston toward the end of the 1989 season, Greg Harris had relocated seven times in an eight-year big league baseball career. Along the way, he had even earned the dubious distinction of being released by a team he never pitched a game for. His Curriculum Vitae: Signed by the Mets in 1978; traded to Cincinnati in 1982; sold to Montreal in 1983; traded to San Diego in 1984; sold to Texas in 1985; signed as a free agent by Cleveland in January, 1988—and released that March; signed as a free agent by Philadelphia in April, 1988; signed as a free agent by Boston in August, 1989 after being released by the Phillies.

"People say I'm a journeyman," Harris admits. "Okay, but I'm a journeyman who's had good years."

Indeed, but the veteran righthander had reached double digit wins only once in a season, a stellar 1986 summer with the Texas Rangers. Nobody, not even Harris himself, could have predicted his yeoman effort of 1990.

"I wasn't surprised he pitched well for us," says Morgan. "He did that when we first got him. What was surprising was that he pitched as well as he did for as long as he did."

With the starting rotation in trouble after the early-season elbow injury to number three starter Dopson, Harris was summoned from the bullpen as a stopgap move. He wound up giving Boston five splendid months, hurling career-highs of 30 starts and 184 innings.

"People say I'm a journeyman. Okay, but I'm a journeyman who's had good years."

Greg's first start came against the A's on April 28. He pitched five shutout innings for the win in a 12-3 blowout. His confidence buoyed, Harris won two of his next three starts and recorded marks of 3-0 in June and 4-1 in August.

"From May into September," Fischer states, "you couldn't have asked for more consistency."

High praise, but well deserved for a man who, before last year, had made but 45 starts in 383 appearances. His last full-time shot at starting, in fact, had been in Texas in 1987, when he compiled a 5-10 record in 19 starts.

"In '87," Harris recollects, "I pitched better than it showed. Our defense wasn't any good, our offense wasn't any good...it was just lousy. In Boston, it was the opposite. We had it all."

Never did the Sox have more of "it" than during that nerve-wracking weekend in Toronto the last week of August. The experts had the Blue Jays as the better team on paper. Obviously, the Red Sox didn't read that document.

"We went up there," Harris remembers, "and Toronto won the first game and was in position to catch us. We could have folded, but the way we came back is something I'll never forget. I was the fourth starter in that series and I didn't want to be the one to lose." He needn't have worried.

"The best thing about the season," Harris states, "was that when we left spring training, nobody thought we could win. Everything was disorganized, in disarray. But from Day One, it fell into place." First place, as it turned out at season's end, thanks in large part to the contributions of former journeyman Greg Harris.

THE BALL WAS BEING HANDED to Jeff Gray for the third time in this four-game series. Two nights before, he had relieved starter Dana Kiecker in the ninth inning and struck out two of the three Jays he faced to save a 2-0 triumph. He needed four outs now to preserve a Greg Harris masterpiece, and the Sox' third straight shutout of their rivals. Mookie Wilson flied out to end the eighth, and in the ninth, with Fred McGriff at first and two out, Gray fanned John Olerud to put the Sox up by four in the division.

ny spring training suggestion that Jeff Gray owned one of the shoulders that would carry Boston to the 1990 A.L. East title likely would have been met with this question: "Who's Jeff Gray?"

"I'd never heard of Gray, never seen him pitch," is how Fischer remembers his reaction to the Sox' decision to sign the reliever. "But he had these good minor league stats, so..."

The righthander's anonymity was justified by his meager total of five major league appearances, all in relief and all for the Cincinnati Reds in 1988. His career stats were nine and a third innings with an ERA of 3.88—respectable, but not exactly the numbers by which young hurlers are remembered. But even if no one else recognized his potential, Gray was not about to underestimate himself.

The Philadelphia Phillies agreed to release Gray last March when he asked to be let go rather than return to Double A.

"When they told me I was going down," the always-direct Gray remembers, "I asked them to look me in the eye and tell me I was a Double A pitcher. They couldn't, so I told them there was only one right thing to do, and they did it."

One team's castoff is another team's treasure—especially when it comes to so rare a commodity as pitching. Gray's home in Florida is about a 45-minute drive from the Phillies' spring training base in Clearwater. Pulling into his driveway after that meeting, he was greeted with the news that two major league teams, having heard about his release, had already tried to contact him.

JEFF GRAY

"I asked them to look me in the eye and tell me I was a Double A pitcher. They said they couldn't."

Gray wound up signing a Triple A contract with Boston and started the season in Pawtucket. He pitched admirably in 21 games there and made it to Boston on June 5 to help shore up a depleted staff. He got right down to work, allowing no earned runs in his first eight games and registering a win, two saves, and two holds in nine appearances for the month.

But Gray slumped badly in July due primarily to a rib injury of which only he and the training staff were aware. In August, with the Sox on the west coast for an important road trip and Reardon less than a week into his recovery from back surgery, Gray was within a bad outing of being sent back to Pawtucket.

Before the ax had a chance to fall, he and Morgan sat down. Gray recalls telling his manager, "I'm ready to pitch the way I did when I first came up."

Gray was wrong—he pitched better. That very August 10 night in Seattle, he was called into a bases-loaded, eighth-inning jam and escaped without allowing a run. Delivering 1 2/3 innings with three strikeouts, Gray was off on his best stretch of the season.

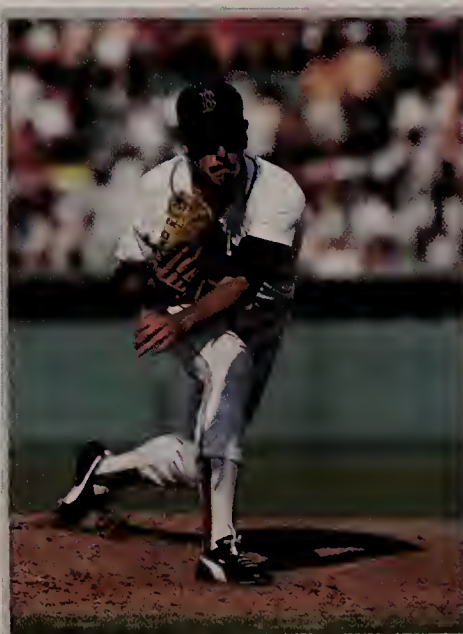

"Gray saved us twice," asserts Morgan. "Once when he first came up, then again after Reardon had to have surgery."

In August, Gray contributed six saves in seven chances with an 0.60 ERA, including the two huge saves in Toronto. He pitched in three of the four Blue Jay games for 2 1/3 innings, striking out four without allowing a hit. At one stretch, he went 14 2/3 innings without allowing a run. And from August 19 through September 12, when Reardon was reactivated, Gray capitalized on all seven of his save chances.

"That series," he says of the Toronto showdown, "was probably the greatest I've ever been involved with. We did everything right and what made it even better is that guys who nobody expected much of—Kiecker, Harris, me—were there in the middle of it."

The Philadelphia castoff pitched in two wins and nine saves for Boston last year. Everybody now knows who Jeff Gray is. There are a lot of American League hitters who wish they didn't.

TOM BOLTON WASN'T USED TO pitching this late in the year. The minor league teams he'd played on since 1980 had always finished up around Labor Day, and in his three previous Fenway Park tours Bolton, a career 2-7 with a 5.10 ERA in 61 major league games through 1989, hadn't been the pitcher most in demand in September, especially when first place was on the line.

But on September 27, 1990, he stood on the rubber in Detroit facing the Tigers with his team a half-game behind the idle Blue Jays and needing a victory to head home with a share of first place.

Bolton, who before 1990 had started a total of four games, gave the Sox that victory with a splendid four-hit effort over seven innings. He left ahead, 3-1, the only blemish an unearned run in the sixth. Though it took four relievers to close it out, the Sox prevailed, 3-2. The club had its first place tie, and Bolton had his 10th win of his breakthrough season.

Until the middle of the 1990 baseball season, Tom Bolton was perhaps most famous as the man who once broke up a baseball luncheon crowd by stating he played baseball because he was "too lazy to work and too scared to steal."

Bolton had recorded but two career major league wins and one save to accompany his few dozen "mops"—finishing off games where his team either led or trailed by seven or eight runs.

So, in the year of pitching surprises, naturally it was Bolton taking the mound against the White Sox on October 2, 1990 the fingers of his left hand gripping a potential A.L. East title.

"I've never felt the way I felt that night," he recalls, "starting a game where we had a chance to win a championship. It didn't work out, but it's something I'll never forget."

Although Bolton pitched nicely into the seventh, the White Sox' victory in extra innings delayed Boston's celebration one more day. Still, the southpaw's effort was quite respectable, especially for a man who had been written off more than Richard Nixon.

"Of all the surprises," says Morgan, "Bolton was the biggest one. He came back up in June and his second game (against Toronto) they pummeled him. After that, you might not figure on anything from him."

Certainly, no one figured that he'd end up with a 10-5 record, nor that at one point in August he would be leading the American League in winning percentage.

TOM BOLTON

"I knew before this season that when a game was on the line, I wasn't going to be in there. This was different."

Bolton was recalled from Pawtucket for the fourth time in his career on June 12. He pitched one scoreless inning on June 18, then was hammered by the Jays on June 20 for six hits and five runs in one inning.

He didn't get the call again until July 1 when with Texas ahead 4-0 and runners on second and third in the first inning, Morgan handed Bolton the familiar mop. Tom not only got out of the inning, he retired his first 18 men and wound up with a 7 1/3-inning, three-hit performance. The Sox offense came through for a 15-4 win, and the suddenly tough lefty was 1-0.

Over the next two months, Bolton was one of the league's best pitchers. After an early-September slump, he rebounded to beat Detroit in that critical September 27 contest to put the Sox back into a first-place tie with Toronto. With a weekend Blue Jays series scheduled to start the next evening, teammate Harris aptly calls it "the most important game of our season."

Theories abound about the secret of Bolton's success in 1990.

"He got his control, pitched ahead of the hitters, and got his curveball over," offers Fischer.

"The kidney operation (Bolton had one surgically repaired in December, 1988) must have something to do with it," suggests Morgan. "His curveball breaks a little more sharply, his fastball is just a little bit harder."

To a point, Bolton agrees with those theories. He does, however, have his own explanation: "One thing I noticed is that since I've been around the league a couple times and the umpires know me, I'm getting some close pitches I didn't used to. Instead of being down, 2-and-0, I'm up 0-and-2. It's hard to pitch behind."

For most of the summer, Bolton acted like a man who's just zipped through a speed trap at 70, eyes on the rear-view mirror, foot on the brake, waiting for the flashing lights to end the joy ride. Finally, come September 27th, when first place was at stake, he had his eyes squarely on the road ahead.

"Before this season, I knew that when a game that meant something was on the line, I wasn't going to be in there," he remembers. "This was different. I was part of it. People were counting on me. It was a nice change. Very nice."

It seems like a long time since Tom Bolton handled that mop.

At season's end, the story was perhaps best summed up by Peña. "Each one of them," he said of the four hurlers, "was waiting for the chance to show what he could do. Each one came through. And each one will do it again."

EXTRA CREDIT: HEROES FOR A DAY

Forty-four players donned Boston Red Sox uniforms in 1990. And with a hit here, a pitch there, and somewhere else a catch, virtually every one chipped in with something that led to a Red Sox victory.

Forty-four players, eighty-eight victories, winning the division by one game—there's a harmonious mathematical ring to these numbers. In 1990, each game truly counted, and recounted below are some of the most memorable contributions from Sox sideline players who helped make that slim margin of difference.

JERRY REED

May 28 at Texas and June 1 at Cleveland

Free agent reliever Jerry Reed joined the Sox in early May. In mid-August, when the club released him, Reed said candidly, "I didn't pitch well enough to deserve to be on this team." But he did pitch well enough to win two games in four days right around Memorial Day—and, hey, wasn't two games Boston's eventual first-place cushion?

On May 28 in Texas, Reed was the third Sox pitcher in a game started by Greg Harris. He was summoned with the Sox down, 1-0, and got the 4-3, come-from-behind win thanks to a two-run double in the eighth by Tony Peña and a save by Jeff Reardon. On June 1, in Cleveland, Reed notched his second and final win in a Boston uniform under eerily similar circumstances—Reed the 4-3 victory, Reardon the save, Peña a two-out triple in the ninth to tie it which set the stage for Mike Greenwell's go-ahead single.

BILLY JO ROBIDOUX

July 2 vs. Texas at Fenway Park

The kid from Ware was the Sox' Opening Day first baseman, but an April shoulder injury rendered him unavailable until early July. Coming back on the second day of the month, having last had a hit on April 14, he was about to see pitching at its liveliest.

The Red Sox trailed Texas, 2-1, in the seventh inning, and Nolan Ryan was heaving heat when manager Joe Morgan sent Robidoux up to pinch-hit for Luis Rivera. As a percentage move it made little sense, perhaps, but this was 1990. Robidoux responded, naturally, with an RBI double down the left-field line that scored Kevin Romine and tied the game at 2-2, and set the stage for victory.

Top: Billy Jo Robidoux
Bottom: Kevin Romine

KEVIN ROMINE

July 2 vs. Texas at Fenway Park

Romine, the Sox' utility outfielder, is no stranger to the spotlight, though it had been a long time since his sudden-death homer off Steve Farr catalyzed the Morgan Magic of 1988.

Almost two years later came an equally dramatic moment for the six-year Sox veteran. He led off the bottom of the ninth with a solo homer off Kenny Rogers, giving Boston a 3-2 win in a game that had seemed lost until Robidoux returned from hibernation.

TIM NAEHRING

July 17-18 vs. Minnesota at Fenway Park

Rookie Tim Naehring's season was shortened by injury, but was by no means uneventful. The young short-stop was a key participant in two historic games—both of which came within his first three big league starts.

On July 17, in his second big league start, Naehring lined his first big league hit. The RBI single to right field in the fifth drove in the winning run in a 1-0 victory over the Twins, who turned a major league record two triple plays for the game.

The next day the kid led off the bottom of the fifth with his first home run, sparking a four-run rally that brought Boston back from a 4-0 deficit. The Sox eventually beat the Twins, 5-4, despite grounding into an American League record six double plays out of a major league record 10 twin killings in the game.

RICK LANCELOTTI AND FRIENDS

August 11 vs. Seattle at the Kingdome

Rick Lancelotti, the active minor league leader in career home runs, was the prime motivator in one of the season's most endearing, and enduring, memories. Lancelotti was 0-for-8 in his brief Boston visit. His contribution to the A.L. East title, however, wasn't so much how he played as how he accessorized, at least for one night.

On August 11, he was among the ringleaders in what has gone down in the books as the Shaving Cream Game. Boston and Seattle had battled deep into the night at the Kingdome, locked up in a tie.

As that duel developed on the field, another unfolded in the dugouts as each team tried to upstage the other's "rally caps." Back and forth they went, the players adding new twists to their attire. Finally, in the 14th inning, Lancelotti, Harris, Naehring, Clemens, Marty Barrett, and associates emerged from the ramp with paper cups stuck on their ears, caps perched inside-out, faces smeared with shaving cream. No sooner did the Seattle bench concede the rally cap victory than Evans launched a two-run homer off Mike Schooler to give the Sox a 4-2 lead.

Oh, yeah. Who was the winning pitcher in that one?

Rookie Daryl Irvine. He worked two perfect innings to pick up what was, at season's end, still his only major league "W."

JEFF STONE

September 28 vs. Toronto at Fenway Park

Perhaps the most memorable hit of the 1990 season was Jeff Stone's game-winning swing late on the night of September 28, a bases-loaded, last-of-the-ninth single off Tom Henke to beat the Blue Jays, 7-6.

Boston and Toronto had come into the night tied for first place in the American League East.

The largest Fenway crowd in a dozen years (35,735) held its collective breath as Boston built, and then squandered, a 4-0 lead. The Sox recovered to carry a 5-4 advantage into the ninth, but Junior Felix's two-run homer off Jeff Gray put Toronto ahead. Boston faced the daunting prospect of having to come back against Henke, the Jays' intimidating stopper.

Yet come back is precisely what the Sox did. They first tied it up on Mike Greenwell's single. Then Stone, who hadn't batted in the major leagues in a year, became the latest Boston folk hero as he lined the first pitch he saw into right-center for the game-winner. Or, and this isn't too much of a reach, the title winner; as things turned out, the victory gave the Sox the divisional lead for good.

EXTRA CREDIT: CATCHER AND COACH

itching carried the Red Sox to the 1990 A.L. East championship. There's not much debate about that. But what carried Red Sox pitching?

Roger Clemens, certainly. And Jeff Reardon, Mike Boddicker, and the many pitchers on the staff who performed better than they ever had. But while most of the credit goes to the men who threw the ball, there's a bow or two left for catcher Tony Peña and pitching coach Bill Fischer.

These are the facts: Playing half their games in the hitter's heaven called Fenway Park, the Red Sox had the fourth best earned run average in the American League, and the best in the eastern division. The club's starting pitching was the best in the league, and that's with 60 percent of the Opening Day rotation rendered out of service.

An obvious contributing factor was the off-season addition of Peña, whose value was both physical and psychological. The hustling catcher called each pitch as though it were the season's most important. One memorable mid-summer night, with one of Boston's young pitchers doing a slow fade, Peña trotted to the mound and told the hurler, "If you throw another pitch like that, I'll call into the dugout and have Joe come out and take your (back porch) out of here."

Shortly thereafter, the young pitcher had worked nicely out of a mini-jam and was on his way to another win.

"You have to give him a lot of credit," says manager Joe Morgan. "His effervescence alone helped with the attitudes. Our guys were always ready to pitch and Peña's attitude was so positive, they were always positive, too."

Fortunately for Boston, Peña catches as well as he talks. He caught more games last year—142—than any other American Leaguer. Of the 12 A.L. catchers who were in at least 100 games, only one, Seattle's Dave Valle, had a better fielding percentage than Peña's .995 and only one, Milwaukee's B.J. Surhoff, had fewer passed balls than Peña's six.

Says reliever Rob Murphy, who played against Peña for several years in the National League: "Not once, no matter what the situation, did I throw a pitch and have any thought at all about whether or not it would wind up at the backstop. None at all."

Fischer, meanwhile, fits perfectly into the major league pitching coach mold: Take the blame when things go badly and get out of the way so the pitchers can collect the hardware when things go right.

Fischer's name won't be found on any books about pitching theory, nor is he about to flood the market with his home videos. In fact, his philosophy sounds suspiciously old-fashioned—throw strikes, get ahead of the hitters and stay ahead of them. It worked for him during his own pitching career, during which he established the current major league record for innings pitched without allowing a walk.

The Fischer Doctrine still works. Each year since his arrival in Boston in 1985, Sox hurlers have been among the league's best in walks-to-strikeouts ratio. The 1990 club topped the circuit in that department: Boston pitchers struck out almost twice as many (997) as they walked (519).

Originally hired by former Sox manager John McNamara, Fischer remained in his position when Joe Morgan took over in '88.

"He knows what it takes to win," Morgan notes. "He works hard with our pitchers, knows when they're doing something wrong and knows how to fix it."

Judging by the fix-it job he did with last year's makeshift staff, it might be fair to call Fischer a master mechanic.

MANAGER BUTCH HOBSON

1990 Finish: 62-84 (.425), seventh overall; fourth in division (27 1/2 GB). Playoffs: None. All-Stars: SS Tim Lincecum, OF Phil Plantier. Highlights: Plantier, who made a successful jump from Lynchburg (A), led all of minor league baseball with 33 HR and was named IL Rookie of the Year. He came within three of the PawSox club record 36 HR before his promotion to Boston on August 20 ... Lincecum hit .269 with a career-high 15 HR in 82 games with the PawSox before his July 15 promotion to Boston ... 1B Mo Vaughn was hitting .161 in mid-June after returning from a broken hand (HBP), but hit over .330 in the final 2 1/2 months to wind up at .295 with 22 HR (both 4th in the league) and 72 RBI, earning PawSox MVP honors ... OF Jeff Stone was 9th in the IL in hitting (.280) and 4th in SB (25) before his September call-up ... The young arms of RHP Josias Manzanillo, LHP Dave Owen, and reliever Jeff Plympton joined Pawtucket from New Britain at the end of the season and keyed the PawSox's only winning month (19-16 in August) ... PawSox manager Ed Nottle's 4 1/2-year tenure ended on June 26 when he was replaced by Red Sox legend Johnny Pesky ... Under Pesky, the PawSox won 25 of their final 45 games and narrowly missed catching 3rd-place Syracuse (1/2 GB) ... The PawSox set an attendance record at McCoy for the fourth consecutive year (298,050) ... Pawtucket was the AAA recipient of Baseball America's Bob Freitas Award as the top Minor League operation of the year.

MANAGER BUDDY BAILEY

1990 Finish: 58-80 (.420) overall; 1st half: 2nd with Prince William (6 GB); 2nd half: 4th (11 GB). Playoffs: None. All-Stars: RF Greg Blosser; SS James Byrd; C Paul Williams. Highlights: On July 28th, 3B/OF Chris Whitehead was married to Stephanie Kay Wilson in a ceremony at home plate. The wedding began at 6PM before the 7PM Lynchburg/Kinston game. (Kinston won the game, 9-3, despite the groom's line of 1-3 with a SB and a great catch in left.) Both teams participated in the wedding ... Blosser tore up the team and the league, earning such honors as L-Sox MVP and Baseball America's top CL prospect recognition. In a balloting of CL managers conducted by Baseball America halfway through the season, Blosser was chosen the best batting prospect in the league. He led the league in HR (18), was 3rd in slugging pct. (.459), and 4th in total bases (205), and was voted CL Player of the Month for July (.343 BA, 35 H, 20 R, 4 2B, 9 HR, 24 RBI, .647 slugging pct., and .432 OBP in 28 games). He also tallied the L-Sox's longest hitting streak at 15 games (.323) from June 2 through June 17. In an attention-getting feat, the team's star hit an HR in the sixth inning at City Stadium three days in a row. The sixth is the frame in which Lynchburg awards a bike to a lucky fan if a Sox player homers ... Williams (16) and 1B Les Wallin (15) combined with Blosser to make up 3 of the CL's top 6 HR hitters ... RHP Brian Conroy and RHP Ken Ryan each tossed one-hitters. Both were against the Durham Bulls. Both were in cozy Durham Athletic Park. And in both cases, Durham's Keith Mitchell had the only hit.

MANAGER GARY ALLENSON

1990 Finish: 72-67 (.518), fourth overall (7 GB). Playoffs: Defeated Albany Yankees 3 games to 2 in semi-finals; lost to London Tigers 3 games to 0 in finals. All-Stars: C Eric Wedge; 3B Jeff Bagwell; OF Mike Kelly; LHP Kevin Morton; RHP Jeff Plympton. Highlights: Bagwell notched league highs with 160 hits and 220 total bases, tied for the lead with teammate 1B/OF Mike Twardoski in 2B (34), and was second in the league in batting at .333, only .001 point off the lead. Those stats, plus his 136 games played and 481 AB are new team records. He was named Topps AA Player of the Month for July and August ... Morton pitched a perfect game vs. the Reading Phillies on August 25, winning 1-0. His season total of 131 Ks were second in the league, as were his 7 CG ... Twardoski was second in the league with 95 BB ... LHP Dan O'Neill went 7-0 with 11 saves and a sparkling 0.60 ERA, allowing only 4 ER in 59.2 IP ... Home attendance jumped almost 20,000 over 1989 (117,432).

MANAGER MIKE VERDI

1990 Finish: 40-94 (.299) overall; 1st half: 4th (29 GB); 2nd half: 4th (15 GB). Playoffs: None. All-Stars: OF Garrett Jenkins. Highlights: Jenkins was a league leader in stolen bases until he injured his knee and was operated on, leaving him out for the remainder of the season. He finished with 40 steals ... SS Gary Villalobos had a team-high .271 BA, followed closely by OF Jose Zambrano (.270) ... RHP Al Sanders led the pitching staff first from the bullpen, then as a starter until his promotion to New Britain. Sanders finished at 7-7 with a 2.30 ERA ... LHP Ed Riley, RHP Andy Rush, and RHP Peter Hoy all showed steady improvement as the season went on.

MANAGER DAVE HOYT

1990 Finish: 32-45 (.416), 4th in division, 19 GB. Playoffs: None. All-Stars: OF Jeff McNeely. Highlights: Three Pioneers made the New York-Penn League's All-Defensive team. 1B Jason Friedman paced first sackers with a .998 fielding percentage, while 3B Larry Grant led his position at .921 and OF Tim Graham captured the outfield honor by not committing an error in 69 games ... McNeely led the club with a .314 BA, 77 H, 37 RBI, and a league-leading 39 SB. Elmira fans voted him the Pizza Hut "Most Popular Pioneer" ... Elmira pitchers led the league in CG with 16.

VOICES OF THE SOX

WRKO ● Broadcasters Bob Starr and Joe Castiglione are together in 1991 for their second year as a team in the WRKO broadcast booth. Castiglione, a Hamden, Connecticut native, began his major league broadcasting career in 1979 in Cleveland, and became the Indians' backup radio man the next year. He did TV play-by-play for the Milwaukee Brewers in 1981 and the Indians in 1982 before coming to the Red Sox, where he enters his ninth season.

Starr's broadcasting career spans over 30 years of radio and television work, including college football and basketball play-by-play, as well as NFL football. He has called the action for the St. Louis football Cardinals, the New England Patriots, the San Francisco 49ers, and the Los Angeles Rams. His Major League Baseball affiliation includes play-by-play for the San Francisco Giants, the St. Louis baseball Cardinals and, just before arriving in Boston last season, eight years in the KTLA-TV booth calling the California Angels games.

AND BOB STARR

NED MARTIN AND JERRY REMY

NESN ● Veteran broadcaster Ned Martin and former major league second baseman Jerry Remy return in 1991 for their fourth season together on NESN. Martin begins his 31st season as a Red Sox announcer. He joined Curt Gowdy on Boston radio in 1961 after having called minor league games for five years. He moved to TV-38 in 1979, and then to NESN in 1985.

Remy, NESN's color analyst, grew up in Somerset, Massachusetts. He played for the Sox from 1978 through 1985, his best year being '78 when he batted .278, scored 87 runs and stole 30 bases. That same season he posted a career-high 19-game hitting streak and was chosen to the All-Star team. Remy compiled a .275 lifetime average over his eight years with Boston before a knee injury forced his retirement during spring training of 1986.

TV-38 ● Color analyst Bob Montgomery and play-by-play man Sean McDonough team up for their fourth year announcing games for Channel 38. Although 1991 is Montgomery's 10th year with the station, his Red Sox ties stretch much farther back. He joined the Sox' minor league system in 1962, made it to the big leagues in 1970, and was a top defensive catcher in Boston until an arm injury shortened his playing career. After his retirement in 1980, he did some Red Sox radio announcing and a local radio talk show before joining Ned Martin and TV-38 in 1982 as a game analyst.

McDonough, after only three years as TV-38's Red Sox play-by-play announcer, has earned a lifetime of respect and admiration from colleagues and listeners for his clear, accurate, and often witty assessments of the events on the field. He made his broadcasting debut on radio for the Toronto Blue Jays' AAA team in Syracuse, New York, then arrived in Boston as a sideline reporter for PBS's "Ivy League Football Game of the Week." Since then, his schedule has been full. He has hosted NESN's "Red Sox Digest" and "Red Sox Weekly" and announced their Hockey East telecasts, has worked as a sports reporter and host of WHDH radio's "Patriots Football," has called college football, basketball, and soccer for ESPN, and has hosted golf for USA cable. In 1990 McDonough added CBS's baseball broadcasts to his extensive resume.

BOB MONTGOMERY AND SEAN MCDONOUGH

CARTER RADIO NETWORK ● Red Sox baseball will be broadcast in Spanish for the second season by Hector Martinez and Bobby Serrano. Play-by-play man Martinez has worked in many aspects of radio and television, including news and sports announcing. He has extensive experience in broadcasting baseball both in the United States and in his native Puerto Rico. He is a regular contributor to La Semana newspaper and is active in many Boston area-public service projects.

Serrano, also from Puerto Rico, has a 20-year background in news and sports. He broadcast AA baseball in Puerto Rico and recently served as program director at Cuenca Vision, Channel 19 in Boston. He teams up with Martinez as color commentator.

The first thing you'll notice about my Samuel Adams Boston Lager is its rich, amber color.

That's the unmistakable color of a robust, full-bodied beer which is virtually hand-made – brewed slowly in small batches – from only traditional ingredients.

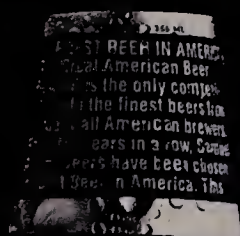

You see, my classic recipe uses only pure water, lager yeast, two-row malt, and rare Bavarian hops. That's it. That's where all the flavor – and color – comes from. And Samuel Adams contains none of the adjuncts or preservatives that dilute a beer's character. So my beer tastes every bit as rich and flavorful as it looks.

Don't believe your eyes? Then try it against the best of the imports. And see for yourself.

Sony Handycam.[®] For a lot of small reasons.

You've got as many reasons to own a Sony Handycam camcorder as you've got kids. It's the perfect way to remember all their accomplishments from first recital to stealing second base. Take Sony's CCD-F501 Handycam. In fact, take it anywhere. It's the camcorder that's small and light enough to keep up with your kids. The auto exposure Sports mode and 1/4000-second shutter speed can freeze even the quickest karate kicks. Its 10:1 power zoom lens takes you from the sidelines into the action. And it even lets you superimpose titles, graphics or lifetime batting averages.

Back home, you'll appreciate the Easy Snap-On Connection that makes playing back tapes on your TV a literal snap. Not to mention the crystal-clear freeze frame and convenient wireless remote. All of which reveals the ultimate truth about the Sony Handycam CCD-F501. It's child's play.
